

science fiction magazine founded in 1930

Science fiction magazine founded in 1930 has played a pivotal role in the development and popularization of the genre throughout the decades. One of the most significant publications in this regard is Amazing Stories, which was established by Hugo Gernsback in 1926. However, for this article, we will focus on another important magazine that emerged in 1930: Astounding Stories of Super-Science, later known as Astounding Science Fiction. This magazine not only transformed the landscape of science fiction literature but also introduced a plethora of influential writers and ideas that continue to resonate today.

The Birth of Astounding Stories

Astounding Stories of Super-Science was first published in January 1930, marking a new chapter in the evolution of science fiction. At the time, the genre was still in its infancy, with only a handful of magazines dedicated to speculative fiction. The magazine was launched by publisher Street & Smith, under the editorial guidance of the noted science fiction writer and editor, Harry Bates.

The Editorial Vision

Bates envisioned a magazine that would not only entertain but also inspire readers to think critically about the future of humanity and the universe. He sought to elevate the quality of science fiction, pushing it beyond the pulp fiction stigma that often accompanied the genre. The magazine featured stories that were grounded in scientific plausibility, focusing on the potential consequences of technological advancements.
