Components of Six Way Paragraphs

2. Explanation

This part elaborates on the topic sentence, providing necessary background information or clarifying the main idea. The explanation ensures that readers understand the context and significance of the topic before moving into evidence and analysis.

3. Evidence

Evidence supports the claims made in the topic sentence and explanation. This can include data, quotations, examples, statistics, or factual information. At the advanced level, selecting credible and relevant evidence is critical for strengthening the argument.
