Historical Background of Jack the Ripper

The story of Jack the Ripper originates from the late 19th century, specifically the autumn of 1888, when a series of brutal murders took place in London's Whitechapel district. The victims, mostly impoverished women involved in prostitution, were subjected to horrific mutilations that suggested a deeply disturbed and methodical killer. The local police and the public were gripped by fear and fascination as the murderer evaded capture. The nickname "Jack the Ripper" was derived from a letter sent to the police by an individual claiming responsibility, although its authenticity remains disputed. This historical backdrop provides the foundation for any discussion regarding the autobiography or personal narrative of the infamous killer, whose true identity has never been definitively established.

The Whitechapel Murders

The Whitechapel murders involved at least five canonical victims: Mary Ann Nichols, Annie Chapman, Elizabeth Stride, Catherine Eddowes, and Mary Jane Kelly. These killings were marked by
