Understanding the Medieval Landscape

Medieval England was a complex tapestry of feudal systems, agrarian lifestyles, and the burgeoning beginnings of towns and trade. Understanding this landscape is crucial for any frugal wizard.

Feudal Society

In medieval England, society was structured around a system of lords, vassals, and serfs. The feudal system dictated not only the relationships between people but also the distribution of resources. Here's how it worked:

1. Lords: Noble landowners who controlled vast estates. They provided protection and governance.
2. Vassals: Lesser nobles who served lords in exchange for land and protection.
