Invention and Initial Creation

The history of Cheetos begins in 1948 when Charles Elmer Doolin, the inventor of Fritos corn chips, purchased the recipe for cheese-flavored snacks from a local snack company in San Antonio, Texas. Doolin experimented with cornmeal and cheese seasoning to produce a new, unique snack. The result was a crunchy, cheese-flavored corn puff that quickly gained consumer interest. The product was named "Cheetos," a combination of "cheese" and "toasts," reflecting the cheesy, toasted cornmeal base.

Early Production and Launch

Following the creation of the original cheese puff, production began under the Frito Company, which later merged with H.W. Lay & Company to form Frito-Lay in 1961.
