Common Confusion and Misuse

Many learners struggle with the differences between these three words due to their similar pronunciations. Misusing them can lead to confusion in communication. Here are some common mistakes:

- Using "to" when "too" is appropriate, such as saying "I'm too tired to go out" instead of "I'm to tired to go out."
- Confusing "two" with "to," as in "I want to apples" instead of "I want two apples."
