The what do the fox say video was produced by Ylvis, a Norwegian comedy duo consisting of brothers Vegard and Bård Ylvisåker. Released in September 2013, the video was initially intended as a humorous promotional piece for their television show. The song's concept revolves around the humorous speculation about the sounds a fox makes, a question that is not commonly addressed in popular media. The production combined electronic dance music with comedic lyrics, creating a unique audiovisual experience. The video features surreal and playful imagery, contributing to its appeal and shareability across social media platforms. Its unexpected success transformed it from a promotional tool to a global viral hit within weeks of its release.

Background of Ylvis and Their Creative Approach

Ylvis is known for their satirical and often absurd comedy style, blending music and humor to engage audiences. Prior to the what do the fox say video, they had produced various comedic songs and sketches, but none matched the viral reach of this project. Their creative approach involved leveraging catchy beats, memorable lyrics, and humorous visuals to create a product that appeals to a broad demographic, including children and adults alike. This strategic combination is a key factor in the video's widespread recognition and enduring popularity.

Production Elements and Release Strategy

The production of the video utilized vibrant costumes, dynamic choreography, and special effects to enhance its entertainment value. The release was coordinated with a television broadcast and an online launch on YouTube, maximizing visibility. The timing coincided with the growing influence of social media as a platform for content distribution, facilitating rapid sharing and discussion. This effective release strategy helped the video reach millions of viewers within a short period, solidifying its status as a viral sensation.

Content and Themes of the Video

The what do the fox say video combines playful lyrics and surreal visual storytelling to explore the mystery of fox vocalizations. The song humorously speculates on various possible sounds a fox might make, using nonsensical and imaginative phrases. The video features the duo dressed in animal costumes, dancing in a forest setting, and engaging in exaggerated gestures to mimic animal behaviors. The contrast between scientific curiosity and absurd speculation forms the core comedic theme. Additionally, the video incorporates electronic dance music elements, making it both catchy and entertaining.

Lyrics and Musical Style

The lyrics pose the central question, "What does the fox say?" followed by a series of invented sounds such as "ring-ding-ding-ding-dingeringeding." This playful approach to language creates a memorable hook that resonates with viewers. Musically, the song blends EDM beats with pop influences, contributing to its energetic and upbeat atmosphere. The repetitive chorus and quirky sound effects are designed to encourage audience participation and mimicry, further enhancing its viral potential.

Visual Imagery and Symbolism

The video's visuals employ bright colors, animal costumes, and fantastical forest scenes to create an engaging narrative environment. Symbolically, the fox is portrayed as an enigmatic creature, reinforcing the theme of mystery. The use of humor and exaggeration invites viewers to suspend disbelief and enjoy the whimsical nature of the content. The choreography and visual effects complement the song's rhythm, making the video a cohesive audio-visual experience.
