Nathuram Godse: Background and Early Influences

Nathuram Vinayak Godse was born in 1910 in a Brahmin family in Maharashtra, India. His early life was marked by exposure to nationalist ideologies and Hindu cultural revivalism. Godse was influenced by several political groups that emerged during the Indian struggle for independence, including the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS) and Hindu Mahasabha. These organizations promoted Hindu nationalism and sought to challenge what they perceived as the appeasement of Muslims by the Indian National Congress.

Early Political Involvement

Godse became actively involved in politics as a young man, initially supporting the Indian National Congress but later gravitating towards Hindu nationalist groups. His political engagement was fueled by a growing frustration with the Congress leadership, especially regarding their policies toward Muslims and the partition of India. Godse's ideological stance hardened over time, leading him to believe that Gandhi's policies were detrimental to Hindu interests.

Influence of Hindu Nationalism

The rise of Hindu nationalist thought in the early 20th century played a crucial role in shaping Godse's worldview. Organizations like the Hindu Mahasabha advocated for the protection and promotion of Hindu identity in a country with a significant Muslim population. Godse's commitment to this ideology formed the foundation of his later justifications for assassinating Gandhi.

Political and Social Climate in India Pre-Assassination

The period leading up to Gandhi's assassination was characterized by intense political upheaval and communal tensions. The Indian subcontinent was grappling with the aftermath of British colonial rule, the partition of India and Pakistan, and widespread violence between religious communities. These circumstances created a volatile environment in which extremist ideologies could thrive.

Partition and Communal Violence

The partition of India in 1947 resulted in massive displacement and bloodshed, fueling animosity between Hindus and Muslims. Many Hindu nationalists blamed Gandhi for what they saw as excessive concessions to Muslims, believing that his nonviolent approach weakened Hindu interests. This sentiment was central to Godse's rationale in his explanation of why he killed Gandhi.

Gandhi's Role and Controversies

Mahatma Gandhi was widely regarded as the father of the Indian nation and a proponent of peace and nonviolence. However, his efforts to foster Hindu-Muslim unity and his fasts to stop communal riots were viewed with suspicion by certain Hindu factions. Gandhi's insistence on reconciliation and his criticism of Hindu extremists made him a target of hostility from groups like the Hindu Mahasabha.

Ideological Motives Behind the Assassination

The core reason why Nathuram Godse killed Gandhi can be traced to deep ideological differences and perceived political betrayals. Godse considered Gandhi's policies as appeasement toward Muslims and believed they compromised Hindu interests and the integrity of India.

Accusations of Appeasement

Godse accused Gandhi of favoring Muslims at the expense of Hindus, especially during the partition and the communal violence that followed. He argued that Gandhi's fasts and calls for peace were detrimental to Hindu survivors of partition violence and that they emboldened Muslim leaders.

Belief in Hindu Nationalism and Cultural Preservation

Godse's manifesto emphasized the preservation of Hindu culture and society. He viewed Gandhi's secular and inclusive vision as a threat to Hindu identity and sovereignty. This fundamental clash of visions between Gandhi's inclusive nationalism and Godse's exclusivist Hindu nationalism was a driving force behind the assassination.

Political Frustration and Radicalization

Frustrated by what he saw as the failure of peaceful political processes to protect Hindu interests, Godse and his associates resorted to violence. The assassination was intended as a political act to remove Gandhi, whom they blamed for India's division and the suffering of Hindus.

The Assassination of Mahatma Gandhi

On January 30, 1948, Nathuram Godse assassinated Mahatma Gandhi in New Delhi during a prayer meeting. The event shocked the nation and the world, marking a tragic turning point in Indian history.

Planning and Execution

Godse meticulously planned the assassination, believing that Gandhi's death would halt what he saw as dangerous policies. He approached Gandhi during his evening prayer and fired three bullets at close range. Godse was immediately apprehended by the crowd and later arrested by the authorities.

Godse's Statement and Defense

During his trial, Godse openly stated his motives and
